Our Experience

- We wanted to:
 - Address a problem
 - Serve our customers better, be more efficient
- We heard bits and pieces of national innovations
 - We recognized that technology could be part of the solution
 - We could see the payoff at the end
- We had Leaders, Visionaries

King County

What Did We Do?

- Decided to start down the path with the vision
- Set up a series of committees, internal and external, operational and oversight, staff, judges, outsiders
- Spread the word to everyone

King County

What Did We Do?

- Decided that pilots and small chunks were the way to go
- Appointed some staff to take the lead
- Started going.....
- No one disagreed
- Not everyone was buying in
- Many excited

King County

What Happened?

- Best Intentions, but.....
- Confusion
- Many leaders saying great things
 - all just different enough
- Committees' roles were confused
- Project Staff roles not clearly defined

King County

What Happened?

- Operational managers bumping into project manager, project staff
- High level thinking wasn't being translated into the month-to-month, day-to-day operations
- Strong need to get everyone's brain involved and get on the same page

The King County Master Plan

- By the time we got to writing ours, it was easy to write
- Almost all the development work had been done
- All the right steps had been taken
- But there was no written guidance, no reference book
- Incredible help to our success

The King County Master Plan

- It brought us all together
- It kept us from re-visiting the same question over and over
- Used it to communicate to our funders
- And to our constituents – the court, the Bar
- All reading the same page of music
- One of the reasons for the award

The King County Master Plan

- Laid Out Where We Were Going
- Divided the VISION into Small, Manageable, Standalone Pieces
 - Separately funded
 - Separately structured, separate goals
 - Separately successful
 - Separate return on the investment

How King County Built It

- Local government funding, ownership, control
- The funding was pieced together
 - Every project justified as part of the whole
- Local ownership of the record
- Custom-built by one vendor
 - Extensive involvement by those who use it most
 - Also by stakeholders

Why We Built It This Way

- Necessity
- Strong sense that it would benefit everyone; use that to build the constituency
- Budget constraints and staff constraints; couldn't do it all at once
- Intuitive and evidence basis for projections
- Saw other models that didn't make sense to us

Why We Built It This Way

- Other models that we rejected included:
 - Starting with E-filing
 - Implementing by Case Type
 - Vendor ownership of the records
- Choice: Could wait for ideal or get going
 - Some are critical of scanning
 - Waiting for real data

Why We Built It This Way

- Have to find the middle ground
 - Would still be waiting.....
- Getting to incoming data, instead of .pdf or .tif was in our master plan and still part of our goal

You Should Do What We Did

- No -- not exactly
- We learned a lot – made many mistakes
- We have a great amount of insight into what we should have done differently
- Talking this week about a combination of what we did and what was right about it
- And insights into what we know now
